

More Ch-Ch-Changes--

Off to Michigan

I am moving to Michigan.

When? Estimated departure is around spring equinox, (March 21).

Huh?

If this is a surprise to you, it is to me, too. This is recent and not something I expected. Such are the adventures of living by guidance. And the "still, small voice within" is extremely strong, and not something my logical mind would cook up.

This inner prompting is directing me to:

1. have faith and just go.
2. focus on deepening God-connection.
3. be staged for some great opportunities awaiting me there. I don't know particulars, but I can feel the excitement of them.

So, after years of accumulating experience, healing my liver, and searching for more comprehensive ways to apply my skills and talents, here are my marching orders. So, I gather faith and pack, knowing details will show themselves in good time. When has divine guidance been wrong before?

How long?

At least a couple years. I am throwing stuff into storage and passing possessions out to friends so I can get going right away. What would you like of mine? Please let me know.

What about contact?

Distance has its challenges, but I am not about to discontinue my precious relationship with you while I am off on a mission. You can visit me, I can visit you, and we have contact through the phone, email, and even Skype! Please use them all so we can keep in touch.

What about Good Earth Garden School?

Just as a mushroom puts out deep networks of hyphae, I'll continue to weave together networks and communities of Earth stewards. I'll be expanding Good Earth Garden School, and its focus will be evolving. I will be:

1. continuing news bulletins about educational opportunities and events
2. establishing networks in Michigan and beyond
3. writing more and more
4. applying the "tune-in with nature" process to solving ecological dilemmas
5. promoting my book as soon as it's published
6. revising my website for more schtuff.

Stay tuned!

I hope many of you feel called to help others

You are highly qualified to assist others to invest in soil-building and food growing in Earth-friendly ways (without synthetic fertilizers and pesticides, etc.).

What about the next Herb Conference?

I would like to see Fairbanks folks organize a 2008 conference . Janice Schofield will be back in Boston in 2009 to speak at the Women's International Herbal Conference (and to launch her new book). And 2010 is open. So there are opportunities for the next three years for those wanting to organize. I will be glad to share all my files and advice.

Meanwhile,

I am feeling strange to withdraw my energy from new projects here, and adjust to being a "short-timer". How about a cup of tea or a good ski together before I leave?

Contact Info

My email addresses remain the same. I don't have a Michigan address or phone number yet, but ask me in a couple months.

Please keep in touch!
