

Now hear this, Eco-Gardeners

Good news is busting out all over! My apologies that I have not kept up in passing on all this exploding news as fast as I would have like to.

- I've been busy hatching personal news. My sabbatical is over; I'm moving back to Palmer, Alaska, starting around mid-May. I'll be using the same address and phone number as you find on my website. Yippie!
- When you see her, thank Julia Bevins, as well as all the amazing hosts for courses, and yourselves for bringing me to Alaska for my 2-month teaching stint. During February and March, I taught in Homer, Palmer, Anchorage, and Mat-Su College—at total of 10 classes altogether. Thanks to each of you who helped make it all come together!
- Great classes and opportunities: the new Alaska Permaculture Guild, centered in Anchorage, is offering several how-to gardening courses, movies, & educational events. They welcome you to join these sessions, discussions and meetings. Check out their fantastic schedule at <http://akpermaculture.ning.com/>
- International Herb Symposium

Janice Schofield and Rosemary Gladstar invite you to the International Herb Symposium Celebrating the Healing Power of Plants, to be held on June 19 ~ 21, 2009, the Summer Solstice, at Wheaton College (near Boston). For more info, visit the International Herb Symposium website;

www.internationalherbsymposium.com, or call the IHS office and request a brochure; 802.479-9825;

email sage@sagemountain.com

Green Blessings, and please tell me about events & resources so I can post them,